KIDNAP RICH SPORTSMAN AT HOME IN WEST

Tulsa, Okla., Gambler Abducted by Gangsters at Country Estate.

RANSOM DEMAND LIKELY

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hurford Return from Trip, Find Armed Visitors.

By The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. Nov. 18—The Tulsa World says George H. Hurford, wealthy Tulsa sportsman and widely known as a bookmaker throughout the southwest, was kidnaped from his country estate near Tulsa Sunday night by armed gangsters who presumably are holding him for ransom.

Two armed men forced Hurford into an automobile and spirited him away, the newspaper says, in the presence of a caretaker, a negro maid, and Mrs. Hurford, whose life was threatened when she pleaded to accompany her husband.

No report of the kidnaping was made to authorities, but the World says it was informed that Hurford was abducted as the culmination of a plot formed several months ago.

Find Kidnapers in Home

Earl Franks, chief of detectives, who questioned Mrs. Hurford last night, said he was informed the couple returned home from a fishing trip late Sunday to encounter two men in their living room, armed with sawed off shotguns.

According to Mrs. Hurford's account, as related by Franks, one of the gangsters said:

"We want you to come with us, George. We'll bump you off if you don't keep quiet."

When the men disappeared in a car, Mrs. Hurford said, she ran to a telephone to summon help, but found the wires cut.

Late last night Mrs. Hurford said she had received no word from the kidnapers.

Plans were made last January to kidnap Hurford, according to Nelson J. Moore, night police chief. He said the alleged extortionists were then believed to have come from St. Louis.

Gets Warning

The plot reached Hurford's ears when one of his associates was approached with an offer to participate in the abduction.

Hurford who has lived in Tulsa for several years has the reputation of being a "square gambler."

Previous threats of robbery and kidnaping induced him to hire a bodyguard some time ago, who did not accompany him on the fishing trip Sunday.

CONGRESS ASKED TO PAY AWARDS IN CASH

Settlement of Compensation Awards May Become Live Issue in House.

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—Demands for payment of soldiers' adjusted service compensation certificates in cash, totalling upwards of $3,000,000,000 are rolling in upon members of Congress from all parts of the country it was disclosed today.

Returning members report that petitions have been received from many quarters and definite movements are under way in many sections to create sentiment for the proposal.

Although the treasury has opposed the plan, the pressure behind the movement is such that it may become a live issue immediately after the session opens in December.

More than 30 members have introduced bills to this effect in the House and more bills are expected to be placed in the hopper early next month. The first move of backers of the movement will be a demand for a hearing before the House Ways and Means committee.

Representative Wright Patman, Democrat of Texas, said today the proposal has gathered strength as a measure of speeding business by increasing the buying power of veterans.

STARTS LIFE TERM FOR GIRL'S MURDER

Ralph James, Former Marion County Man, Enters Michigan Penitentiary.

Ralph James, 33, former Marion county man, yesterday began a life sentence in a Michigan prison for the slaying of Alice Collier, 15-year-old school girl, at Detroit.

James was sentenced to the Marquette state prison for life after he had confessed to choking the girl to death because he was afraid she would tell of improper advances he had made during an automobile ride on a lonely road.

He was convicted 24 hours after the confession.

He formerly resided at Meeker, where a mother and sister now reside. He did odd jobs and later became engaged in construction work. He helped build the Marion sewage disposal plant several years ago, leaving shortly afterward for Detroit during a building boom. He was a cement worker by trade.

The girl disappeared about three months ago, after she had left for a neighborhood grocery store in Detroit. James said he knew the girl, and offered to drive her home. However, they drove into the country, where he admitted making improper advances. James said he tried to pursuade her from telling on him, and choked her when she screamed.

The body of the girl was found in a clump of bushes and James was arrested and confessed two weeks later.

G. O. P. GETTING SET FOR 1932

Permanent Organization To Be Maintained from Now on at Washington.

MEETING AT WHITE HOUSE

Plans Discussed at Conference of Party Leaders with Hoover.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—The Republican party will maintain a permanent organization in the capital from now on, in preparation for the campaigns preceding the 1932 Presidential election.

This was determined at conferences of party officials with President Hoover yesterday. Most of the officers of the Republican national committee were at the White House, but Senator Fess of Ohio, the national chairman, was not.

His absence from the conferences immediately stirred fresh speculation on the possibility of his intention to retire. However, late in the evening the chairman issued a brief statement to the effect he had been advised the conferences would be held but had not considered it necessary for him to attend, as they had dealt with office affairs requiring only the attention of the officers who talked with the president.

The definite result of the consultation was that Robert H. Lucas of Kentucky, executive director of the national committee, will have charge of the permanent party headquarters, assisted by George B. Keim, secretary of the national committee, and James L. West, director of publicity. This is the group which, with Senator Fess, had charge of the work just before the congressional elections.

Those who met at the White House said their principal business there had related to the committee's financial affairs. Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer, reported that after furnishing funds for congressional and senatorial campaigns, the national committee now had a balance of approximately $7,000 with no outstanding obligations.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Nov. 18—Heard our ace Eddie Rickenbacker over the radio Sunday night. He was just decorated last week for bringing down half of Germany.

We are the luckiest nation in the world to have heroes that can live long enough to have their deeds recognized. They give Eddie what was said to be a medal, but we don't know that, for his whiskers are so long now that they cover it up.

We have every kind of week in the world, there's "apple week," "grin week," "don't blame your congressman week," "do your Christmas shopping early week." Let's add one sensible one to 'em all.

"Remember our heroes week." You would be surprised how many we got that have forgotten.

INDICT 10 MEN FOR SMUGGLING LIQUOR BY AIR

Canada-U. S. Syndicate Also Charged with Illegal Entry of Aliens.

OPERATING 30 PLANES

Landed Contraband in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois Cities.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 18—The operations of two aerial smuggling syndicates whose air fleets brought liquor and aliens from Canada to the United States were revealed today with the indictment of 10 men by the federal grand jury.

According to the government's information, the syndicates operated 30 planes for the smuggling of liquor and aliens from Canada to remote landing fields in the United States.

Although the operations of the syndicates were confined for the most part to the Detroit area, government investigators said, planes landed contraband in the vicinity of cities of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Agents Join Gang

Evidence on which the indictments were based was obtained by undercover agents who joined with the syndicates' smugglers for weeks.

The investigators reported that 1,800 cases of liquor cleared a single Canadian airport in one month at the height of the operations while correspondingly large amounts were sent into the air from other fields across the international line. The planes operated by the smugglers were capable of carrying from 15 to 40 cases of liquor on a single hop.

Among the destinations reported by the planes when they took off from the dominion airports were Saginaw, South Bend, Toledo, Milwaukee, Cincinnati and Sandusky.

"Hide and Seek" Game

The operators of the smuggling syndicates kept up a continual game of "hide and seek" with federal officers, landing fields were changed frequently and hidden storage points were maintained at fields where the planes landed their cargoes.

Twelve of the planes which the syndicate is alleged to have used were seized by government agents during the last eight months.

PLAN WEDDING FOR COUPLE ALREADY WED

Secret Marriage of Mellon Heir Revealed on Eve of Second Ceremony.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18—Wed in a secret ceremony more than a year ago, W. L. Mellon, Jr., grand nephew of the secretary of the treasury and member of one of Pittsburgh's most prominent families, and his wife, formerly Grace Rowley, also of Pittsburgh, today were to decide with other members of their families whether plans for a formal wedding ceremony were to be carried out.

Announcement of the secret marriage was made last night while preparations were being made for the wedding set for tomorrow. Mrs. Mellon said she and her husband had eloped, and because "mother and father were anxious to have all our friends see me married," they decided to go through with the formal ceremony.

"Then we thought better of it," she said, "and we told them the whole story today."

The bride's mother, Mrs. E. H. Rowley, said this morning that it had not been decided whether a second ceremony would be held. The decision, she added, rested upon a conference between members of the two families to be held some time today.

Mrs. Rowley disclosed that the first information concerning the elopement was received from the minister who performed the ceremony at Wellsburg, W. Va., Nov. 16, 1929.

The Rev. Dr. Milton M. Allison, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Wellsburg, Mrs. Rowley said, read newspaper accounts of plans for the wedding ceremony scheduled for tomorrow. He communicated with a Pittsburgh newspaper, she said, and gave the information concerning the ceremony he performed. His wife was a witness to the marriage.

Mrs. Rowley said her daughter, who is 19 years old, was at the Rowley home today and that Mellon was at the home of his father. Young Mellon is 20. The young Mrs. Mellon's father is a Pittsburgh business man.

WILL RECHECK VOTE ON PICKREL-BROWN

Former Expected To Retain Post Despite Closeness of Race.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 18—Election of William G. Pickrel, Democrat of Dayton, as lieutenant governor of Ohio, will not be certified by the secretary of state until a recheck of the precinct vote is made. This count was ordered to determine the correctness of official totals reported by the various election boards which gave Pickrel a lead of 271 votes over John T. Brown, Republican incumbent.

The recheck was started after the board figures were announced yesterday, giving Pickrel 916,705 and Brown 916,434. Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, who hoped to complete the canvass today, said it was improbable that the count would be changed materially, despite the closeness of the race.

Edwin A. Todd of Springfield, elected without opposition for the short term state treasurer, was to take office today. He succeeds H. Ross Ake of Canton, under whom he was assistant treasurer. Todd's term expires Jan. 12, when he relinquishes the office to Harry S. Day, elected for the full two-year period.

By The Associated Press

BAGDAD, Irak, Nov. 18—Former King Hussein of the Hedjaz, one of the most romantic figures in the Arab revolt against Turkey in which Lawrence of Arabia played so prominent a part in World war days, died today, an exile on the island of Cyprus.

Hussein, who was one of the most picturesque and powerful rulers in Arabia in many years, threw his support to the allied powers in the World war.

Thrones were found for his sons Feisal and Abdullah who now rule Irak and Transjordania, but fate was not so kind to Hussein himself. In 1924, Ibn Saud, the Wahasi chieftain whose power had been rising rapidly, revolted and drove Russein from his throne and into exile.

WILL ANSWER TO CHARGES IN COURT NOV. 22

Casey May Face Additional Action When Government Completes Probe.

PLACE LOSS AT $223,000

Report Says Former President Maintained Two Separate Accounts.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, Nov. 18—Arraignment of James E. Casey, former president of the Citizens' National bank at Galion, against whom three separate indictments were returned by the federal grand jury in federal district court here late yesterday, will be held Nov. 22, it was announced here today by William J. McDermott, assistant United States district attorney, who is handling the Casey case for the government.

The three indictments contained 32 counts, charging falsification of records, falsification of reports to the United States comptroller of currency and misapplication of funds.

Only a partial report of the investigation of the bank's records by the United States department of justice agents was necessary to obtain the indictments against Casey, according to McDermott, who presented the case to the grand jury. Further indictments may be sought from the January grand jury, after the investigation of the department of justice has been completed, McDermott stated.

15 Counts in Two Groups

Fifteen counts were included in each of the first and second indictments returned against the resigned president of the closed Galion bank. The third contained two counts.

Eleven of the 15 counts in the first indictment charged misapplication of funds. Three charged making false reports to the United States comptroller of currency, and one falsification of records.

The 15 counts in the second indictment charged misapplication of funds, and the two counts in the third indictment were for falsification of depositors' accounts.

The total deficit at the bank as revealed in the indictments, was $223,049.30. Assets of the bank at the time of closing were $1,331,729.61, and liabilities $1,151,251.21, according to the indictments. Capital, surplus and undivided profits of the bank when closed were $181,251.81, all of which was wiped out by the loss.

Carried Two Accounts

The indictments charged that Casey maintained two separate accounts with the Vercoe Brokerage Co. at Mansfield. One of the accounts was in his own name and the other was in the name of the bank. They also charged that Casey maintained an account with Otis & Co., of Cleveland, in his own name.

Casey is alleged in the indictments to have deposited as collateral a total of $113,764.31 in cash, bonds and securities, to purchase stocks on a 50 per cent margin in the Vercoe company in the name of the Citizens' National bank. The deposits were made at irregular intervals over a period of more

PROVING THAT NOW IS THE RIGHT TIME TO BUY

Prices will not stay at the present low levels. Consequently the "Buy Now" call is of vital significance.

See what happened to the copper market. Up to last week copper was 9¼ cents a pound and buyers were few. The majority thought it would go lower. Instead, when orders started the demand was larger than expected and the price went to 12 cents a pound.

The delay cost the put-it-off fellows dearly. Now there are rumors of steel prices going higher and should that occur, other commodities will follow, for steel usually sets the pace.

Then comes industrial activity. The same principle applies to merchandise in the stores of Marion and other communities. By buying now you not only get in on the low prices but help move goods that must be replaced. That means work for men who are now idle.

NIGHT COUGHING

Quick and Safe Way To Stop It!

Whatever it is due to—cold, catarrhal condition of the throat, dust irritations or smoking, night coughing can and should be stopped. Nothing will pull you down faster, for it not only deprives you of needed sleep, but it tears you to pieces.

At the first sign of a cough, take good old "Pisos for Coughs." It does the five things necessary to stop a cough and repair the damage done. It checks the cough spasm, loosens the mucus, opens the air passages and soothes the inflamed tissues. At the same time it has a tonic effect that tends to build up what the cough tears down. Only Pisos supplies these five vital effects and contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach. Safe to give even to babies. All druggists sell Pisos in 30c and 60c sizes. Be sure you get Pisos for Coughs.—Adv.

SOMETIMES we fool ourselves. Take this matter of insurance on household goods. Get a pencil and paper and figure it out for yourself. How much did you pay for your rugs—your furniture, silver, dishes, pictures, radio, piano, curtains, books, clothes and the many things that go to make up a household? Hard to realize it's so much, isn't it?

Now how much insurance have you on all these things? Do you think it is enough?

VELEZ, ROBINSON PLAY LEADS IN "EAST IS WEST"

Picture Version of Famous Stage Play Coming to Marion.

BY HALLIE HOUCK

LUPE VELEZ, Lewis Ayres and Edward G. Robinson play the leading roles in "East is West," coming to the Marion Wednesday and Thursday. "East is West," is one of the best known stage plays written by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer.

This will make Ayres' first romantic role. The theme song of the show will be the semi-classical song hit, "Chinese Lullaby."

Several hundred Chinese were called to the studios in Hollywood to give atmosphere to the picture. Los Angeles' Chinatown was ransacked by the casting department for Oriental types, with the result that the men and women assembled represent one of the most representative groups of Chinese ever obtained for a film play.

MIMES PLAY PART OF OHIO PROGRAM

From the trailer of The Matrimonial Kiss coming to the Ohio Wednesday and Thursday, the show should be all that its advertised. Laughs all the way but all in fun.

Frank Fay is cast as a Parisian hairdresser.

Lilyan Tashman, Florence Eldridge, Betty Mercer, Marion Byron and Vivian Oakland are other members of the cast.

On both Wednesday and Thursday at 9 p. m. the Marion Mimes will present a one act play as a part of the theater program. The cast includes Miss R. G. Williamson, Miss Gladys Probst and Charles Grace.

Made of a transparent material, a pocket drawing instrument has been invented with which it is possible to do much of the work requiring a set of angles, French curve and T square.

Kerchiefs Are Important Costume Detail for Well-Dressed Woman

THIS is a grand time to turn your thoughts to Christmas shopping. And if you are considering some practical gifts why not head the list with the ever welcome and popular handkerchief.

Both friends and family should be delighted to receive any one of the large assortment of the kerchiefs that are being displayed in the Marion shops.

If you really want to add a particularly personal touch to the gift, then initialed hankies are just the thing. Orders placed now will assure delivery in time for Christmas. Some will be the French product while others will be the work of the domestic shops. And they can be purchased at most inexpensive figures.

Clever monogram combinations have been arranged for the handkerchief to be carried by the business woman or man. One store is featuring the individual signatures that are embroidered in the corners. This line of linen handkerchiefs is less expensive than those with the three or four letter monograms.

The names and monograms can be had in both white and assorted colors. Stores are featuring dainty white linen square handkerchiefs with a small colored border and in the corner is the first name of the owner in the same shades as the edging. These are among the least expensive of the various styles of personal handkerchiefs and all popular first names are available. If the name desired is not in stock, it requires but several days for delivery.

HANDKERCHIEFS — both women's and men's—are more partial to white or white with a fine colored stripe or border, and are possibly more in vogue at the present time than the all colored square.

Monograms for this style of handkerchief should be in white or in the color of the stripe. For the so-called tailor-order handkerchief the monograms should be in white or the color of the border and the letters should be of simple design. The simpler the monograms or letters the smarter.

Cut-out monograms are very swanky. But they are quite expensive and not nearly so practical.

Sport kerchiefs for the school miss and younger women are in many colors. However the foundation is largely white. Many of these novelties are imported and the color combinations are numerous.

CONVENTIONAL designs, flower combinations, stripes and polka dots in a riot of color are all to be found on the sport linen squares.

The dainty dress handkerchief is either in white or a white and color combination. It is made of the sheerest linen and the majority of them are featured with hand work. Small linen colored squares or circles are appliqued on many of the linen hankies. They are further embellished with dainty rose buds and artistic scrolls. This type of handkerchief will possibly be one of the more popular along the gift line for the holiday shoppers.

The large selection of colors to choose from will be one advantage, and the wide range of prices the other. Shoppers familiar with the price of handkerchiefs will readily see that the pre-holiday line now in the stores is offering far greater bargains than in previous years.

No dance frock or evening gown will be complete for this season unless accompanied by a large chiffon handkerchief of the same shade as the gown. These dress hankies are 12 to 18 inches square and elaborate in design. In the plain shades of light green, pink, blue and yellow there is possibly an edging of lace.

THE other styles are beautifully shaded from the deepest tone to the light pastel motives. The large assortment will make matching the gown an easy matter.

Dogs, cats, well known Mother Goose characters, and other novelties to delight the youthful eye are on sale for children. Christmas morning should not be complete for the average child unless a number of these cute handkerchiefs, cleverly boxed, are left by Santa Claus.

The plain white handkerchief with the single initial in the corner continues to hold first place for men's use. Along the novelty line there are many bright colors, some in plain colored linen with a white cut-out design in the corner. Small stripes on the large white linen squares will also come in for consideration by the Christmas shopper.

Y-Indus, Squareheads To Compete for Trophy

The Marion Y-Indus and the Squareheads clubs will play the first of a proposed annual volley-ball contest for the possession of a loving trophy on the Y court Wednesday at 8:30 p. m.

The clubs recently purchased a keg, decorated it in the colors of the two clubs and will decide Wednesday night who will possess it during the coming year. Five games will be played on the third floor court at the Y.

Girls of Church Society To Sing Christmas Eve

The girls of the Senior Christian Endeavor society of First United Brethren decided at a meeting last night at the community house, to sing carols on Christmas eve at the homes of shut-in members of the church. Lucille McIntyre and Margaret Gannett were hostesses. The society also planned to hold fellowship meetings once a month. Kester Hill was awarded first honors in a contest, after which refreshments were served. The society will meet Dec. 9.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

FOREIGN SLUMP AFFECTS WHEAT

Grain Values Undergo Setback; Government Buying Aids Recovery.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

WINNIPEG, Nov. 18—Wheat prices fell as much as eight and a half cent a bushel on the Winnipeg market today, then bounded back three cents or more. November wheat fell to 55 cents, but rallied to 58½, as heavy liquidation by Chicago and New York interests brought the selling wave to a climax and professional traders came to the support of the market.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—All grain values here showed an early downward trend today influenced by sharp fresh setbacks in wheat prices at Liverpool and Buenos Aires. Corn showed more depression than wheat did, the Chicago wheat market being relatively firm as a result of continued buying support here from government sponsored agencies. Opening unchanged to ½c lower, prices of Chicago wheat future deliveries underwent a material sag for deliveries other than December. Corn started ½@2½c off and subsequently held near to the initial range.

Pressure of offerings of new Argentine wheat in Europe at cheaper prices was reported today together with advices of unlikely big stocks of wheat already on hand at Rotterdam and elsewhere in Europe.

Meanwhile weather conditions in Argentina appeared auspicious for the oncoming harvest there, similar advices from Austria were current, and the Winnipeg wheat market was reported as sick. On the other hand Washington dispatches circulated here told of activity of farm board representatives looking to further appropriations to back up the new buying movement of the farm board's marketing allies.

Downturns in Chicago wheat prices were more or less checked as a result of large buying orders for December wheat at 73 and for May at 76c and under. Simultaneously, however, the corn market weakness was the fact that primary arrivals of corn today totaled 753,000 bushels, compared with 389,000 bushels a year ago. Oats declined.

Provisions reflected breaks both in hog values and in grain.

Einstein Would Require Students To Master Trade; Blames Teacher If Studies Fail To Interest Pupils

Lists Much of History Teaching as "Unnecessary Ballast" in School System.

IS OPPOSED TO POLITICS

Would Eliminate All Dependence of Teachers on Need of State Support.

Albert Einstein here is shown in the quiet of his Berlin home, with his wife at the right. In his library (top) he appears with his son.

Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of three stories by Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press bureau in Berlin, portraying the human side of Albert Einstein, world-famous physicist.

BERLIN—Even the small boy who finds arithmetic a bore has a concept of Albert Einstein, father of the theory of relativity which has puzzled many of the world's leading scholars.

"It nine cases out of ten the teacher is at fault, believes the famous savant a teacher himself.

With utmost simplicity this man whose complicated theories have amazed his generation explains his attitude toward present-day educational methods.

If he had his way, college entrance examinations would be abolished. He would throw a lot of "unnecessary ballast," such as dates in history, out of the curriculum, and he would compel every student to learn a trade as part of his higher education.

Requirements for Teacher

As for teachers, he says "only he can be called a teacher who can teach interestingly, who can present his material, even though it be an abstract subject, in such a manner as to awaken a resonance in the soul of his pupil and keep alive his curiosity."

"The trouble today," he explains, "is that children are fed up with definitions instead of being introduced to tangible things."

The professor strongly favors the film as an aid to teaching. Lines of a geographical map, he says, would have an entirely new significance for the pupil if he could see in a moving picture just how the country looks.

In physics he believes, many experiments that cannot be shown in small schools because of lack of equipment could be easily demonstrated by a film.

"In short," Professor Einstein declares, "the salvation of our schools lies in more demonstration. The thing that is to be learned must be experienced."

Not Real Test

Final or entrance examinations he claims, are "no real test of knowledge or ability."

"For a few hours the students are forced to exert their minds in an unusual artificial manner, only to forget almost immediately most of what they studied on this special occasion.

"I should object to the university any pupil whom his teacher, having observed him over a period of years, will recommend as fit."

Regarding "unnecessary ballast," Einstein considers most teaching of history as dispensable.

"I don't regard it as a mishap if a pupil never learns anything about Alexander the Great, nor of dozens of other conquerors," he says.

"If you insist upon delving into the ancient past, then please save the student from Cyrus Artaxerxes and Vercingetorix and rather tell him something about the exponents of culture, such as Archimedes, Ptolemaeus, Hatem, Appolonius—of discoverers and explorers."

Against Politics

Politics, too, would be eliminated from Einstein's curriculum, because, he says, objective teaching is almost impossible when teachers are economically dependent upon the state or the board from which they draw their pay.

However, Einstein would withhold a graduating diploma unless a student could qualify as a carpenter, bookbinder, locksmith, or other skilled artisan.

He would exact this demand "both because of the intrinsic value of learning a trade and because it makes the educated man feel that he belongs with the broad masses of the people.

"To learn a trade means for a student to broaden the foundation upon which he rests as a moral personality.

"School is to develop first of all the man, the character and not merely his brains.

Views on Women

Einstein is willing that women should enjoy advantages of higher education, but he is frank to state that he does not believe women will, on the whole, attain the same heights as men.

"All roads to learning should be opened to women," he says, "but nobody should blame me if I am somewhat skeptical about possible results.

"I am thinking of certain obstacles in the female organism which were put there by nature, and which stand in the way of our applying the same standards as with men. The case of Mme. Curie (discoverer of radium) is merely the exception to the rule."

In the next and last of a series of three interviews, Einstein gives his views on current political and economic problems.

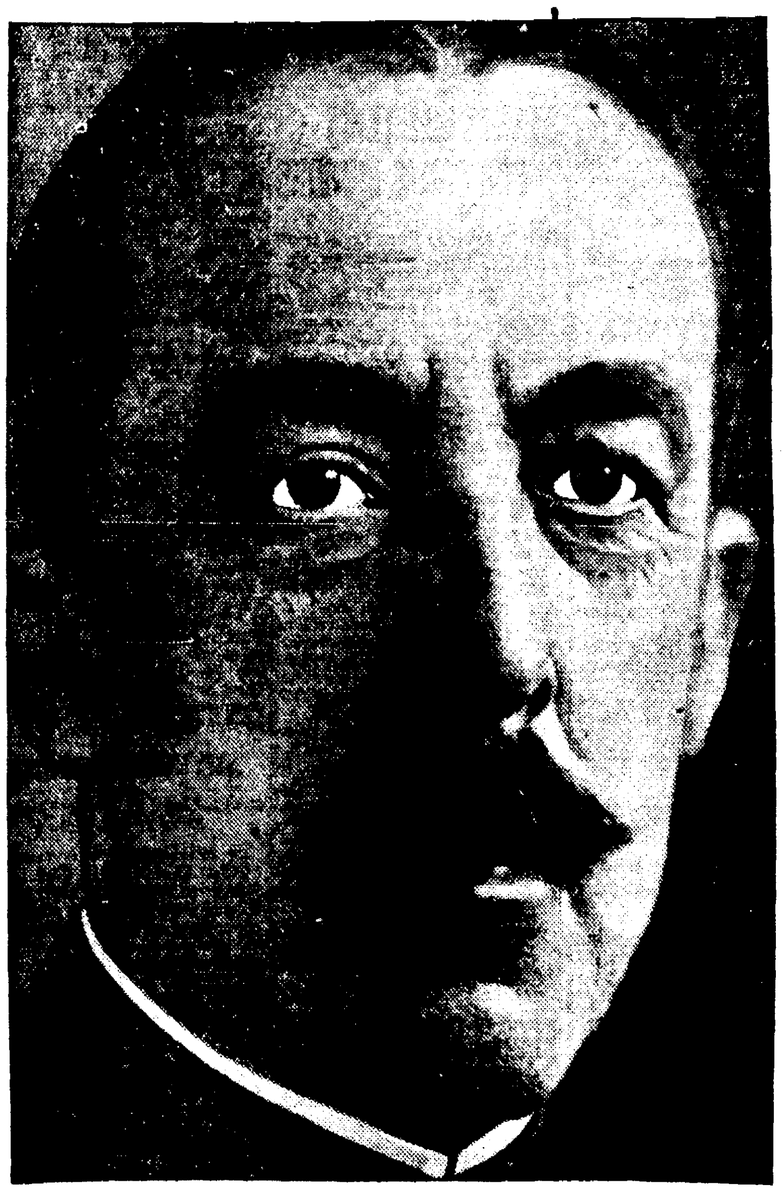
"EVIDENCE OF MODERN ENTERPRISE"



Says
MAJ. GEN. FRANKLIN W. WARD
The Adjutant General of New York

"Alertness to grasp the application of modern developments is a necessary characteristic to successful management. By including the Ultra Violet Ray principle in 'Toasting' of your tobacco you give evidence of modern enterprise which I applaud.

Franklin W. Ward

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows — that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray. LUCKY STRIKE — the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos — the Cream of the Crop — THEN — "IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating!

"It's toasted"

Your Throat Protection — against irritation — against cough

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Maj. Gen. Franklin W. Ward to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Maj. Gen. Ward appears on this page.

GAS CO. ANSWERS SERVICE PROTEST

Document Filed with State Commission: Hearing on Dec. 1.

Answer to a complaint brought before the state utilities commission by City Solicitor Carter Patton, charging Marion is not receiving adequate gas service, has been filed by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., according to United Press dispatches from Columbus.

The answer sets forth that Grant Haldeman, who signed the complaint as a representative citizen not receiving proper service does not make all the residents of Marion complainants.

It also asks the commission to recognize the statutory jurisdiction of the city council as the initial body with power to order extensions.

The complaint will be heard by the commission Dec. 1.

Man Arrested in Fraud Ordered Out of Town

Alexander Robinson, alias A. R. King, 50, of Youngstown, was ordered to leave Marion and placed under a suspended 10-day workhouse sentence when he pleaded guilty in municipal court today to a charge of defrauding a taxi company.

The sentence will become effective if Robinson returns to the city.

Robinson was returned to Marion after he failed to pay a taxi bill of $25 after hiring a cab of the Yellow Taxi Co. here to take him to Canton Friday night.

The Sunday School Athletic council has elected Guy Stoner, president, Arthur Yazel, vice president, K. W. Fritz secretary, and John Hoffman, treasurer. Indications point to a banner year in the league with new teams from Prospect Lee Street Presbyterian church First Reformed church and Green Camp seeking admission. The season starts Dec. 2.

Plans are being perfected for a Pioneer, Friendly Indian and Junior High basketball tournament at the Y Friday, Nov. 28. This tournament will include basketball and other games. Saturday, Nov. 29, a hike is scheduled for the boys.

The physical department of the Y is cooperating with the Main street celebration committee in planning games and stunts. The contest committee met at the Y Tuesday to work out a number of events.

The Business Men's volley ball league is getting under way Wednesday. A team composed of Marion men played a team of business men from Mansfield at the Y gymnasium Tuesday. Marion won all the five games.

The girls' gym and swimming classes met Tuesday afternoon and the women's gym and swimming class last Wednesday night are attracting considerable interest. Miss Rita King is leader of these groups.

Wednesday morning a group of representative business men met at the Y for breakfast. These men were members of the membership committee and a few other men who are especially interested in the program of the Y. The committee is headed by A. A. Van Atta. The members of this group are obtaining new members and renewing old memberships.

Some changes are being made in the Y building so that the work of receiving and reconditioning clothing, shoes etc. may be handled efficiently. The committee in charge of this work has held several meetings and work will be actively under way in another week.

Boys' club leaders met last Tuesday night in the "Y" dining room to discuss problems and methods for leading groups. W. S. Chambers, state boys' work secretary, led the group discussions. The leaders will meet each Tuesday for four weeks in this training course.

W. S. Chambers led a conference for the Harding H. Y club in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night. About 25 boys attended the meeting.

The initial meeting of the State Street Gra-Y club was held in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night. This group was organized with Donald McCormick as president and Charles Cartwright as leader.

Robert Stout was elected president of the Silver Street Gra-Y club at their weekly meeting Friday night. After the meeting the club went to the gym floor for games and finished their evening with a swim in the Y pool.

Homer Rankin was elected president of the Glenwood Gra-Y club at their weekly meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday night. The club drew up a constitution under the leadership of Donald Cain.

The boys membership campaign is going into its second week. A pep meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. Friday night. A. A. VanAtta chairman of the membership committee, gave a short talk.

Red Cross Active

The Red Cross Chapter, another agency of the Community Fund spent an active week, according to reports of Miss Margaret Dowd secretary of the chapter.

Disability allowances for which veterans applied the summer are now being paid. Allowances are from $12 to $40 a month and as these are awarded only on disabilities rated as permanent they may be expected to continue during the veterans' life.

The Red Cross float in the Armistice day parade represented a first aid dressing station, with doctor, nurse and medical corps man ministering to a wounded soldier.

A second shipment of Christmas bags for soldiers and sailors now in active service will be made this week, and clubs which have not yet sent in their bags are urged to do so at once.

Earl Smart, chapter chairman, is heading the county roll call which is now under way.

TO SEND FOOD

Members of the Junior Mission Band of Emauel's Lutheran church decided to send a box of food to the children's home at Mars, Pa., at a meeting in the church basement Saturday. Now Look at Him

O. O. McINTYRE, writer of the "New York Day by Day" column published in The Star and hundreds of other papers throughout the country was a decided "bust" as a newspaper reporter and admits it, according to H. W. Carr, personal representative of United States Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch. Carr visited here recently.

Carr got McIntyre his first job on on a newspaper, the old East Liverpool Tribune, but "Odd," which is McIntyres' middle name, was fired after five weeks, Carr says.

McIntyre then went to the Dayton Journal, where he lasted no longer than at East Liverpool, and then moved to the Cincinnati Post, finally winding up in New York City where he trod the streets for two years before landing another job. When he once established himself as a columnist he began attaining the prominence he now enjoys.

Carr and McIntyre went to school together 30 years ago at Gallipolis, which McIntyre still calls his home. Carr broke into the newspaper game with the Gallipolis Tribune, and when he left to go to the East Liverpool Review he was succeeded on the Tribune by McIntyre. The latter, however asked Carr to get him a job in East Liverpool and finally Carr placed him with the opposition newspaper, the East Liverpool Tribune.

The McCulloch representative went westward at the same time McIntyre decided to go east, and on the Pacific Coast he became affiliated as a political writer with the Hearst newspapers. He was in Los Angeles for five years, then returned east to work on Hearst papers in Chicago and New York City.

While here Carr was introduced to Elmer F. Blazer, LaRue newspaper publisher, and when the two began a conversation they discovered they were old-time friends, for Blazer, too, is a former Gallipolis resident. They had not seen one another in 50 years.

Important Item

IT WAS a newsy little postcard but it was never delivered. The writer, who signed herself "Mother," wrote to John and mailed the card Friday at 1:20 p. m. but she failed to put any address in the space set aside on cards for this important item in mailing.

The message read: "John: We will be down Saturday about 12:30 Eastern Standard time, Louise and myself. Get the extra ticket and if you can't wait on us leave it at the house. Dad can't come. He has to work. See you soon. Mother."

If the mother reads his column she'll know why John didn't leave the extra ticket at the house.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY OFFERS NEW BOOKS

City Institution Prepares Readers' Guide as Book Week Feature.

Cooperating in the national observance of Book week the Carnegie library offers a wide variety of old and new volumes in special lists compiled for publication throughout the week.

Books of especial interest to women include "Early American Silver," by Avery. The volume covers early American silver of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, dividing it into its geographical as well as chronological spheres of development.

The mind, customs and life of the south from Virginia to Texas in the last hundred years are portrayed in Becker's "Golden Tales of the Old South," while the "Best Short Stories of 1930," include 20 stories chosen for their merit from the vast writings of the year. Walter Damrosch tells of his childhood in Germany and on through his tours of the United States in a new edition of "My Musical Life," while the story of contemporary American writers and their works from 1890 to the present time is to be found in "New American Literature," by Pattee. Provocatively written, Phelps "Essays on Things" deal with everything from weather to spooks while a clever combination of excerpts and connecting summaries of the 10 most representative plays of the year is to be found in "Best Plays of 1929-1930" by Mantle.

"GREAT" SHIRES SAYS "I DO"

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, Nov. 19

ALTHOUGH the astrological prognostications for this day have a most fortunate aspect promising advancement, fulfilled ambitions, increased fortunes and decidedly prosperous conditions in many directions, yet there is a sign of outstanding events more or less exciting or sensational. While calm and well directed control of affairs should be crowned with gratifying success yet a proclivity to turbulent words and actions may prove a frustrating factor. There are intriguing or baffling situations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which a very great deal depends on calm and well-directed actions, with firm control on tongue and temper. Also there may be an inclination to strange or precipitate personal behavior which may prove a disconcerting force. With care there is much solid success and prosperity to be won, with assistance from friends and elders.

A child born on this day may be expected to be efficient, capable and ambitious in many solid directions.

Fares on New York City's transit lines during the year ended June 30 numbered 3,368,700,000, the gross passenger return being $161,624,000. Here we have another light on the cost of living in great population centers.

The fair sky and balmy air of Sunday brought out heavy auto traffic with a consequent death toll in Ohio of twelve. Indian summer, it is apparent, is not an unmixed blessing to humanity.

In the first two weeks of the present month, building contracts in the sum of $3,162,000 were let in Chicago and the work in sight is put at $9,500,000. Surely such construction as this must soon begin to make appreciable inroads into unemployment in the Windy City.

A headline over a Washington dispatch reads: "Borah Vocal on Special Session, but Ambiguous." Huh! It was a cinch that he would not depart from his habit of vocalizing, and it will hardly pass for news that he was ambiguous.

Statistics just given out by a big New York life insurance company indicate that the number of accidental deaths this year will reach 100,000 and that the number of those injured will total several millions, automobile accidents contributing the major part of the toll. What other land would permit such persistent slaughter to continue?

The bakers' strike in Madrid was ended Sunday following three days of rioting in which two persons were killed and over 200 injured. The communists certainly overplayed their hand in bringing about the bread strike. They couldn't possibly have inaugurated a cause better adopted to winning the support of the public to law and order.

It's easy to understand the distress of the Seminole Indian woman down in Oklahoma, who told a senate sub-committee on Indian affairs investigating Indian conditions there that she should have an allowance of $1,050 a month, in the light of her statement that she hadn't the money to buy gas to operate her four automobiles, by figuring that it is approximately four times the anguish of a lot of people with only one car in the same financial fix.

The Army-Navy Game.

The intimation comes from Washington that the decision of the Army and Navy football teams to put on a game for charity in New York City, December 13, was brought about by the personal intervention into the negotiations of President Hoover, who practically ordered the two teams to stop their fooling and get together.

The dispatch states that the White House followed the course of negotiations between the athletic directors of the two institutions and finally, irked at the delay, "ordered the pettifogging tactics on both sides to cease and the game to be played."

Senators and representatives have been seeking to patch up the differences which have existed between the two institutions in connection with the annual contest for several years without avail. However, when the commander-in-chief of both the army and navy spoke, the sidestepping ceased and arrangements for the playing of the game on the date named were entered into and in large part perfected, those who assisted in the conference at the Army and Navy club in Washington including Major Philip Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at the military academy and Lieutenant Commander Fred G. Reinicke graduate manager of athletics at Annapolis. It goes without the saying that the connection of the latter, a former resident, with the negotiations added interest to them locally.

The scale of prices will range from five to twenty-five dollars according to the location of the seats, and the boxes will be sold at auction and are expected to bring fancy prices. There will be no free seats save those occupied by the West Point cadets and the Annapolis midshipmen. Even the newspaper writers who are to report the game will have to pay, and as the use of the grounds will be donated it is expected that the fund realized for charity will reach at least $500,000, and probably exceed that sum, which will be turned over to the Salvation army for distribution.

Under the circumstances, the game should and doubtless will, bring a greater financial return than any contest in all the history of the gridiron.

World Network of Air Mail Lines.

Practically [illegible] with the arrival in this country of Major [illegible] Woods Humphrey, manager [illegible] of Imperial Airways, Ltd., of London, England, Postmaster General W. [illegible] of the United States and [illegible] has announced that Imperial Airways and the Pan American Airways of New York have arranged for a transatlantic air service between this country and Europe. [illegible] matters have not been settled as to the [illegible] facilities, exact [illegible] and so forth.

The two [illegible] are among the largest and most efficient in the world. The former, subsidized by the British government, operates from London over Europe with branches reaching out to India and Cape Town, South Africa. The latter operates 8,000 miles a week over 22,000 miles of territory in Mexico, the West Indies and Central and South America.

The plan is to operate flying boats with a range of 3,000 miles for the transportation of passengers, express and mail over a 2,000-mile route. Miami and very probably here Charleston, South Carolina will below [illegible] had weather hop for the American terminals and include Bermuda and the Azores as stopping points. There is a very strong probability that the Aeropostale, of France, will also be interested in the venture and be instrumental in securing landing field in France. The expectation [illegible] assistant postmaster general has announced is to have the service in operation for the transportation of express and mail within a year and to maintain a three day service.

The only stumbling block in the way of the operation of the line is the law which prohibits the operation of foreign aviation companies in this country, but this will in all probability be obviated if in no other way, then by operating American planes only between this country and Bermuda, the government that island, on which Imperial Airways holds the sole landing privilege, being friendly to the planned line.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that the Pan American Airways began to operate over that part of the Paramaribo-Santos line between the Dutch Guiana terminus and Para, Brazil, last week and will begin the operation of the remainder of the route by the way of Maranhao, Fortaleza, Natal, Bahai, Victoria and Rio de Janeiro on Thanksgiving day. When in full operation, the new South American service will surround that continent with air mail facilities with connection with the east coast of Africa, and thus operate mail service between the New and the Old world by both the North and South Atlantic.

A few years more—possibly but one, two or three—and there probably will be a network of air mail lines covering the entire civilized world. Yet we speak of aviation as being in its infancy.

The Christmas Savings Fund Plan.

While the total of the Christmas savings funds to be paid out by seven of the financial institutions of the city will fall something like $22,000 short of that of last year, the $141,500 which will be distributed December 10 among the 3,000 members will add greatly to the cheer of the glad holiday.

The business recession which has been felt since last Christmas being considered, the showing made by the local Christmas savers is a surprisingly good one. In many cases these savings may bring joy and happiness to what otherwise would be a bleak Christmas time. If it does this, it justifies any little trouble or even any hardship, if hardship there has been, on the part of contributors to such funds and is a splendid testimonial to the worth of the Christmas savings fund idea.

This year, the distribution of $141,000 will be especially advantageous in another way. It will add impetus to the extent of the total of the fund to the "Buy Now" campaign which is being waged in the city to get more money into circulation looking to the revival of normal business activities and the ultimate reduction of the unemployment from which the country is suffering.

While congratulating ourselves that so many of us have seen fit to become members of Christmas savings clubs, let us hope that every community in the land this year has as large representation in such clubs in proportion to its size as we have here in Marion.

The officials of Clarke county, Virginia, have voluntarily cut their salaries ten per cent, effective at once, and use the money for county purposes as needed, in view of the economic depression and the farm losses resulting from the long drought experienced there. Isn't action like this somewhat revolutionary?

One of the leading press opponents of prohibition is now claiming that the repeal or substantial modification of the Volstead law would save the United States government close to $1,000,000,000 a year now paid out for prohibition enforcement, plus over $1,000,000,000 which would be turned back into the federal treasury. Is this to be taken as an indication that there is a movement afoot to return to the licensed open saloon?

Colonel Lindbergh is to have a new plane capable of making 225 miles an hour. Supposedly, a machine of a third that speed can crash just as hard but despite that, the colonel should realize that the country is sufficiently apprehensive as it is without an effort on his part to go after speed records.

Arriving in New York, Aimee Semple McPherson denied that she had made whoopee in canal zone cabarets, insisting that she had taken no drink there other than water or lemonade and we are inclined to believe her. Aimee is too shrewd a business woman to make a foolish public play like that.

Dr. Clarie Pommet, designer and builder of the DOX, refutes the story cabled from France to the effect that the big seaplane was forced to come down in the estuary of the Gironde by the failure of four of its twelve American-made motors. He says specifically that the motors operated satisfactorily in every respect. But it is difficult to understand the animus behind the French story.

Editorial Opinion.

CRIME IN ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

During the course of his recent visit to this county Sir Hugh Turnbull, London police commissioner, said that one of the chief reasons why England had a better record than the United States for the handling of crime was that much of the energy of the authorities was directed to the prevention of crime. In his opinion the streets of London are safer than those of Detroit. It might be said that they are much safer than those of any large city in the United States.

This eminent authority declares England is more successful in this regard because she has fewer laws and they are better enforced; because the financial status of the offender is allowed to have no bearing on his punishment; because a social disapproval of law-breaking exists in England and crime is not fashionable, because there is no prohibition law in England, because the police are easy on first offenders and very severe on habitual criminals; because the British police work to keep people out of jail rather than to put them in.

These comments are worthy of the careful study of our public officials and criminologists for the simple reason that crime is the greatest problem we have in the United States today. It may be argued that prohibition is the most-discussed issue, but as a matter of fact prohibition is the chief phase of the crime question. One of the causes of the success of the police system in London and in England is that it is entirely divorced from politics. Over there they would no more think of letting partisanship enter into the administration of the police than they would of making it a factor in the administration of justice. In this country our police systems are almost entirely influenced by partisan politics. Police commissioners and directors of public safety are changed with each succeeding administration.

Nothing could be more ridiculous. Yet the people calmly tolerate it, probably on the principle that what is everybody's business is nobody's business. What every city should have is a police department absolutely free from political control. The head of the force should be a man who is a first-class executive and one who is also familiar with police work. Such a person, when selected, should be regarded as the permanent head of the police, not to be removed except for cause. Every patrolman should be appointed with the distinct understanding that he is not to be called on to do political work for any party or any faction in any party.

That is the ideal we must strive for. It can be accomplished here just as it has been in England if the people want it badly enough to insist on it and to work for it. That would be the starting point. It should be followed with a resolution to pass fewer laws and to see that those on the books are strictly enforced without fear or favor.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

When Ohio Became a Bank Robber.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

Just now, with bank robberies following each other in rapid succession, it is interesting to note that the state of Ohio itself once engaged in such an enterprise. It was in 1819, when the United States bank had established two branches in Ohio one at Chillicothe and the other at Cincinnati. The great majority in Ohio opposed the institution. It tended to take away from the Ohio people the profit made in banking.

The legislature conceived the idea of taxing the Ohio branches of the bank out of existence and a law imposing a tax of $50,000 on each branch in the state was enacted. That was in 1819, and all branches that continued in business after the first of September of that year would be subject to tax. The state auditor, then Ralph Osborn, was charged with the collection.

He employed one John L. Harper to do the actual work. Why this man was does not appear in the history of the matter. He must have been a man of nerve, for he was to go to Chillicothe and demand the tax, if not paid he was to overpower the bank officials and take it. He appeared at the bank on the evening of September 17, and forcibly took currency and coin to the amount of $100,000 and took it to Columbus. The auditor paid him $2,000 commission and credited the state on his books with $98,000 but on legal advice kept the money separate from the other state funds.

The United States bank sued the state for the money taken, with interest, but at the same time started its sequestration until the final decision in the case. The suit was in federal court which gave judgment as asked. The state was held to be outlawing the branch banks, but when the case reached the United States supreme court the circuit judgment was reaffirmed (except as to interest). Because of the sequestration order the interest was not allowed. The matter came to an end after six years of litigation in the great John Marshall tempest in the opinion that the Ohio claim was unlawful to the constitution and laws of the United States. It was a high moment in public finance, on the part of the young state of Ohio.

Drink Plenty of Water.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Troubles of the gall bladder are all too common today. You can scarcely find a day when there is not the announcement of an operation for gall stones in the case of some prominent person. Each of us is likely to receive news of some friend who is suffering from a disorder of the gall bladder.

The gall bladder is a pear-shaped body, and is about the size of a pear. It is closely associated with the liver. The narrow end tapers off into a tube or duct, which is called the "cystic duct." The drainage tube of the liver and the cystic duct join, to form another and larger passageway. This is called the "bile duct," or the common duct, and it opens into the intestinal tract.

The bile, that fluid held in the gall bladder, is an ideal place for the growth of germs. Pus germs, those of pneumonia, of dysentery, or of typhoid—any of them may be found in diseased gall bladders.

The bile is composed of several ingredients, one of which is called "cholesteria." It appears like fine granulated sugar—white, glistening crystals which are taken from the blood.

When the liver and gall bladder are normal everything is fine. But should the gall bladder be irritated or disturbed there is sure to be more than the required amount of blood there. If there is long-continued congestion inflammation follows. This means that still more blood rushes to this area. More blood is crowded into the vessels of the gall bladder. All the time cholesterin is being taken from the blood. The more blood there is the more cholesterin is found.

Then a germ or a group of germs offers a splendid nucleus for the accumulation of cholesterin. The excessive deposit of this substance clusters about any roughness in the gall bladder, so that layer after layer of these cholesterin crystals gather until the mass is like a grain of sand. After a while it grows large, until a small stone forms. There may be just one, or there may be others if the conditions are just right. Of course, when a stone begins to leave the gall bladder then there is great pain.

It is well to avoid all forms of indigestion and constipation, because intestinal fermentation promotes the growth of life.

To get rid of the body wastes, to carry away the substances which may cause gall bladder trouble one should drink a good deal of water. One of the greatest mistakes a person can make is not to drink plenty of water.—Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Eros.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

A certain little planet is named Eros on its discovery was first observed in 1898. Since that time it has been a subject for special study. This at first sight appears singular, since perhaps 1,000 of these planetoids have been found in the heavens. There was a special reason however why interest should concentrate upon Eros. Its exceedingly thin orbit of an elliptical shape brings it nearer to the earth than any other planetary body. It furnished an opportunity to make accurate determinations, or rather close estimates, of solar system distances.

Just as every one knows that Columbus discovered America in 1492, and that George Washington was born in 1732, so every one knows that the distance from the earth to the sun is 93,000,000 miles. But is it? The actual distance from the center of the sun as a matter of fact is not a fixed quantity, always the same. It varies with each sector of the elliptical orbit, being greatest at aphelion—summer solstice—and least at the opposite end of the orbital diameter. Of course, the distances at the periods of the equinoxes fall between the maximum and minimum values.

When we speak of the distance from the earth to the sun we mean the average distance. This is actually the radius of a circle assuming that the earth moved in a circular orbit about the sun. Such a distance has been generally accepted by astronomers as the yardstick of the solar system.

Inter-stellar distances are so great that extreme mathematical accuracy is not possible. This is obviously the case since all determinations are necessarily indirect. Various ways perhaps as many as a dozen have been devised by ingenious astronomers for determining this earth-sun yardstick. But even so, no exact determination of this mean distance has ever been found. But the determinations made are accurate enough for all practical purposes.

It has long been known that a fairly close value for the earth-sun yardstick is 92,870,000 miles. The measurement is off, not millions, but only thousands of miles. Would Eros afford a method for determining a closer approximation?

Many photographs of Eros were made, the entire series being placed in the hands of A. R. Hinks, of the Cambridge observatory. The displacement of the image on one of these star plates is approximately one-twentieth of an inch. So it may be seen that the work was one of great delicacy, and the resulting calculations required much time and labor. Hinks finally reached the conclusion that "the angle subtended at the sun by the earth's radius is 8.807 seconds of arc. This is a quantity known to astronomer as the solar parallax. It represents the angle between the lines from the sun's center to the ends of the earth's radius.

The length of the earth's radius is known, to a high degree of accuracy. From the triangle of which this is the third side, it is not difficult to compute, giving the correct value of the solar parallax, the length of the sun-earth unit of solar system measurement. It was found, in round numbers, to be 92,900,000. This is greater by 30,000 miles, than the value agreed upon at the Paris conference of 1911.—Copyright, 1930, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

For years Pierre has conducted a smart restaurant in the apartment at 250 Park. Pierre has long dreamed of conducting the most magnificent hotel in the world. A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, Nov. 18—A curious thing about Washington—perhaps one of the most interesting—is the number of retired or rejected politicians encountered from day to day.

On the street, at official functions, in private gatherings—almost everywhere may be seen those whose names defy forgetfulness, though they may be out of the spotlight, going peacefully about their private affairs.

Take, for example, Joe Tumulty, once of New Jersey, now of Washington—secretary to President Wilson all the eight years he was in the White House. He is a familiar figure in the capital. And C. Bascom Slemp and Everett Sanders, secretaries to President Coolidge, have law offices here. They mingle much as they did when they held official positions.

And there's Frank Mondell, once a power in the house of representatives, now practicing law. Phil Campbell, once of Kansas; Joseph Davies, former commissioner of corporations; Sydney Anderson, late of Minnesota, who figured so prominently in the house in the farm relief battles, not to mention dozens of others.

Even those now dead have their names in the main. In the telephone directory the name of Robert Lansing, war-time secretary of state, still appears. Until just recently the name of Admiral Dewey, hero of the battle of Manila, was listed there.

Administrations and congresses come and go on the political tides, each bringing to Washington new faces and personalities. The ebb leaves flotsam and jetsam of far-off political storms.

Why some elect to cast their lot with the permanent, non-official population of the capital is a matter of conjecture.

There are those who first came here to office late and remained to lobby.

The result of national political preferment—be the time in office long or brief, has been to transplant some of them socially and in private occupation.

There are those whose prolonged absence in Washington have snapped ties and friendships back home. New tendrils have sprung up to bind them to their new environment.

And there are some who entertain the hope political defeat was only momentary. The blind former Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, is a representative of this class.

So, a glimpse behind the curtain of political life in the capital reveals many a once powerful political figure—men who stalked the stage of the national political stage in days not so far back for the memory of some of us.

For some reason they [illegible] strangely metamorphosed into that army of the American democracy, the obscure group of the nation—voteless Washingtonians.

THERE IS RIOTING in Barcelona; the old song, "Weep, Weep, Catalonia," is still sung in Spain.

Rioting in Havana, rioting in Madrid, a bomb blows up a soldiers' barracks in the Irish Free State, kidnaping and murdering continue in China.

This is not yet what you can call a really civilized world.

Men are still settling their problems as they did a hundred thousand years ago—by killing those with whom they disagree.

NEW YORK'S district attorney says racketeers and gangsters present a problem in New York that threatens every citizen, even government itself.

Louis Sherwin, writing for Cyrus H. K. Curtis, recalls that nearly 80 years ago, in 1851, San Francisco, facing a similar crime problem, knew how to deal with it. A citizens' committee of 7,000 hanged four men and expelled 30 from the city. Thereupon 800 of the lawless element left of their own accord, convinced that San Francisco climate was bad for their health. But today's criminals are of sterner breed, perhaps, and in New York it is alleged that some of them have for partners magistrates and other officials.

32 CHARGES FACED BY GALION BANKER

In his own name, Casey is charged with depositing approximately $48,500 of the bank's money to purchase stocks in the Vercoe company and Otis & Co.

Says Deposit Taken

Casey is alleged to have attempted to cover up the shortage in the bank's accounts with Vercoe by appropriating a deposit of $112,500 made in the bank by the North Electric Manufacturing Co. The money was deposited by the electric company for the purchase of Liberty Loan bonds, the indictments read, and Casey is said to have issued the company 15 certificates of deposit. The indictment states that the bank's records failed to reveal any entry showing that the Liberty bonds had been purchased for the electric company.

Three of the counts in the first indictment charged falsification of reports to the United States comptroller. On Oct. 4, 1929, Casey is charged with having reported the bank's resources in bonds and securities as $692,766.95, when in reality the resources were $639,777.64, according to the indictments.

The second report in which a discrepancy was found was sent on Jan. 7, 1930, and stated that the bank's resources in bonds and securities were $634,743.46. The actual resources were $580,356.

A discrepancy in liabilities of the bank to depositors was the third false report made to the comptroller on April 7, 1930, the indictments charged. This report stated that the liabilities were $111,926. Investigation disclosed liabilities to be $224,426.72, on that date.

The third indictment charges Casey with making false entries in the accounts of two depositors of the bank. He is alleged to have subtracted $1,500 from the account of A. R. Sorrick. He is also charged with placing an indebtedness of $532.59 against Mart L. Helfrick, when in reality he was indebted only $499.91 to the bank, it is charged.

The Citizens' National bank was closed by the government last July 29. Casey, who resigned his position as president the day preceding the closing, was arrested July 30. He entered a plea of not guilty to the charges placed against him when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner H. K. Cochrane, and was released on bond of $12,500.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Harold Goodnow, 36 Cane Street, Fitchburg, Massachusetts.

CHAPTER 8

CLARK SMITH was the son of a Washington patent lawyer of national reputation and of greater social importance — outside of Cloughbarre—than the Frosts and the Brownbecks. He was a young man with much charm, real strength of character and every promise of making good in his chosen career.

But because Clark's parents were living apart, Mrs. Frost vigorously opposed the marriage, and felt that she had been stabbed in the back when her brother and David, after mature deliberation, set her objection aside.

Now that Amelia had left her, Mrs. Frost decided David and Fanny must come back. Now she could never bear that big house, ghostly with memories. David looked white and drawn—with Fanny's cooking no wonder—he would be far better off in his old home. Sheila would be better off. And as for Fanny—well, Fanny knew that David had certain definite obligations when she married him. What obligation could be more binding to a son than his widowed mother?

The first blow fell about three weeks after Amelia's wedding. Things had been going better in the little cottage. David had had another small raise. He came home late one hot afternoon in early July to find an expectant wife and daughter in fresh white dresses a flower-decked table set under the arbor, his favorite dishes for dinner. But he said little, ate almost nothing. After the table was cleared and Sheila put to bed, Fanny asked David timidly if anything was wrong.

"I'm afraid there is. Do you know anything about these?"

"Why, those are the bills for my bridesmaid's outfit."

"Well?"

"But why have they come to you?" Amelia gave me the dress, hat, everything."

"Mother doesn't seem to think so, at least she said they were your bills."

"David, Amelia certainly gave the things to me. She picked them out herself—even the slippers. I wanted gold ones but she chose blonde satin so I could wear them both afternoon and evening."

"Did she say she gave them to you? Exactly what did she say?"

"I don't remember the actual words, but she told me I was to be her only bridesmaid and was to wear yellow chiffon—that she'd see about my dress."

"Then she didn't say she'd pay for it."

"That was understood. Amelia knew I couldn't afford an expensive dress. I thought the hat was too much, twenty-seven dollars, but Amelia said it was so becoming I had to have it." Fanny might have added that Amelia had also said that it was high time she had one decent outfit.

"Did Amelia charge the things or what?"

"Amelia had accounts all over town. She was buying a lot of things and she'd just say, 'Send this to Mrs. David,' or 'Send this to me.' She must have forgotten to tell your mother about it. I'll write her tomorrow."

"I'd rather you wouldn't."

"But we'll have to—we haven't $133."

"Mother was very certain they were your bills. She told me today she was overdrawn at the bank. She said she would never have had the house repapered and ordered that new bath room put in if she'd known Amelia was going to be married. I can't have her stinting herself to pay for your clothes—or let Amelia ask Clark to pay."

Fanny winked back her tears, glad of the growing twilight. She suspected that David did not altogether believe her story, but did not dare make sure.

It wasn't fair of David—it was frightfully unfair—to think that she would tell lies about big things, or about things that really mattered. Just because, once or twice, she had told a few little fibs about bills to keep David from worrying. Or had she fibbed to David because she was afraid of him?

David loved her; he was impatient at times, but he was always sorry afterward, and he was never cutting or sarcastic except in fun. It was his silences, his habit of withdrawing into himself that frightened her.

Her own angers were quick but soon ended an occasional boiling over and lettin goff steam that cleared the atmosphere and left no dregs. David took his angers hard, he took life hard. When he was offended it was as if a changeling came and dwelt in his place. A stranger in David's dear image sat opposite her at table, talked to her, kissed her goodby; a stranger who was devastatingly polite, devastatingly considerate. He might stay for hours or days—and then some morning Fanny would wake forlornly to find she had been forgiven—the hated changeling was gone and her darling David back.

Fanny was guiltless in the matter of the bridesmaid's dress and knew she ought to have it out with her husband. But she loved him too entirely to be able to punish him.

The second blow fell long before the bridesmaid's dress was paid for. Fanny wakened one week day morning to find the sunshine pouring in and the clock striking 8.

"David darling, we've slept right through the alarm. It's 8—we must rush."

"No hurry—I didn't set the alarm."

"You didn't? But why?"

"If you must know I lost my job three days ago."

"And you didn't tell me?"

"I didn't want you to worry. I thought I'd land another, perhaps a better one, before I told you."

Fanny laid her cheek against David's, kissed him over and over. David suffered the caress but did not return it.

"A fine man you married," he said bitterly.

"Darling, don't be silly. Just because that wretch Jim Tuttle is jealous of you."

"I'm certain Jim hadn't a thing to do with it—he was too surprised. It was Mr. Tuttle."

"The hypocrite! What excuse did he give?"

"None at all. He wrote me a formal note enclosing a month's salary in lieu of notice, and then went out of town."

When Fanny had given Sheila her breakfast and started the coffee she came back and sat on the edge of the bed. David had not moved. "Darling, has it occurred to you that your uncle may be back of this?"

"Yes. At least he's got the town sewed up so that I'll have to go back to the bank or starve."

"Nonsense. It's terribly flattering, of course, the trouble your uncle takes to force you to come back, but because his horizon is limited is no reason why ours should be. There are thousands of towns outside of Cloughbarre where they're looking for men of your ability."

"My ability? After four years I worked up to about the wage a day laborer starts with. Plasterers and plumbers and painters make double—and have no trouble holding down their jobs."

"Poor lamb, you're morbid. You know as well as I do that you've been discriminated against here. Mr. Tuttle never paid you what you were worth because he knew there wasn't any other place in town open to you. With a wife and baby on your hands, naturally you haven't felt free to strike out and try some place else. That's what your uncle's counting on. Now it's up to us to show him what's in us."

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

TUESDAY. I got up and let Jubilee down. It was cold and he didn't want to get let down. I let him down anyhow. He'd feel funny if sometime I didn't pull him up at night and he froze all his hair off. There isn't any more snow on the ground than there is feathers on a snake and a week from Thursday is Thanksgiving, and my grandfather said while we were eating breakfast that a green Thanksgiving means a fat graveyard. My ant said she supposed that he thought graveyards ought to do reducing exercises and they probly would if they knew he didn't like them fat. She said she certainly would. He said she didn't need to, that her ribs probly look like a zilofone and what she needs is corn beef and cabbage and lots of it, and she said all he needed was brains and lots of 'em. My mother and father looked at each other like they were tired. My ant isn't related to my mother and my grandfather isn't related to my father, so when they try to get funny it makes the whole family tired. Only my grandfather pays board and my ant don't, so he has the best of it.

We went down to the dam, and there is ice around the edge of the pond but the ice out in the middle is gone. Then we went to the stink factory, and then we went and looked at he new house from a long ways off, and then we went to the lot where the house burnt down a long time ago and looked in the cistern that we let water run in and someone had drowned a cat in it. We fished it out and all took a look at it, but none of us knowed it. We put it on a board and me and Banty and Nibs and String and Reds and Peanuts were pulled barriers. Hopper couldn't be one, because he is a crip and is too up and down, and a fella has to be steady to be a pulled barrier. The ground was too hard to dig a hole, so we took it back to the cistern and Hopper was the preacher and we were going to dump it in again when Nibs jerked the beard and the cat slid off on the Lost Rag of Tripe's foot, and he grabbed it up and soaked Nibs in the back of the neck with it whilst he was running away. So we didn't put it back in the cistern.

When we got to school we were going in the basement to get warm by the furnace, but Mush came out, and a lot of the ink is still on his face from yesterday, and we observed him and he chaserted us till the bell rang. He is too fat to ... went to the stink factory. The girls wouldn't stay, because the men were taking a horse apart. Nobody can learn anything if they don't watch things.

Because women's vocal cords are lighter and move more easily than men's requiring less effort to use, women talk more than men, according to a German scientist.

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Father's Warning Adds to Madge's Uneasiness.

MY father was ... Philip Verizen ... my ears ring after he had retreated to the library where, with a book, he had announced his intention of staying until ... Christmas Eve ... was over.

... mood ... would be distinctly disagreeable for Roderick, he had said, and I knew that he was right. Yet how I could manage to banish that impression from Dicky's mind, unless I determined to break off all business relations with Philip Verizen altogether, I couldn't see.

I was not yet ready, to throw the contract which I had made with the great producer, although I could imagine circumstances which might lead me to sever relations with him. But I knew that one reason for my persistence in keeping the lucrative and fascinating work which Mr. Verizen had entrusted to me was the fact that Dicky appeared never to have thought of any connection between the magazine partnership of himself and Edith Fairfax.

A Deadlock.

It was a deadlock. I told myself, but one which I saw no way of breaking. And above everything else I wanted to keep Philip Verizen in benign humor through this Christmas time in the hope that he might be won over to the betterment of his son and Dicky's lovely niece.

Sometimes the knowledge that a stone wall confronts one gives the impulse to turn around and put one's back against the wall. It was something akin to this feeling, I imagine, that made me resolve to crush any misgivings as to the events of the coming twenty-four hours and go on exactly as if I had not a care in the world beyond the carrying out of my Christmas celebration successfully.

Running childish feet helped to strengthen the resolve and I smiled happily down at Junior and Roderick as they threw themselves upon me.

"Oh, Mums, you look just like the Christmas angel," Junior said admiringly, and Roderick uttered an expressive "Gee! I'll say so!" Behind them Katherine smiled at me mischievously.

Childish Admiration.

"You mow 'em down in swaths, old girl, all ages. But I'll admit that hair of yours and your coloring tonight above that cream gown do slightly justify Junior's encomium."

It was a gown of the vintage of several years, this cream lace frock. But it is becoming. It was one of Dicky's favorites, and the first Christmas Eve I wore it, for there is so much color in the Christmas decorations I prefer to see white gowns against them. Junior was so ecstatic in his approval that I have put it on every Christmas Eve since, altering it to suit the prevalent fashions. This year I had lengthened it with ruffles of cream tulle, and Junior, who, like most children, is eagerly approving when his mother is dressed up, walked around me admiringly.

"Some mother I've got!" he said approvingly, and when Roderick, after an instant's pause, brought out a confused, "Some aunt I've got!" there was so wistful an expression in his eyes that the hug and kiss I gave to Dicky's motherless nephew was as warm as those my own small son received.

"The question before the house," said Katherine, "is how long these boys may stay up. I haven't made my decision yet. I told them that tonight they must ask you."

"Oh, Mums, can't we stay up a long time? Don't sing the carols right away," Junior exclaimed, "for after the carols then it feels like going to bed, and I don't want to feel that way yet. Do you, Rod?"

"No, you bet," Roderick echoed and I looked at them perplexedly.

"Just what do you want to do?" I asked. "Do you want to help trim the tree? If you do, and see it tonight, it won't be a surprise in the morning."

"No, no," my small son said vehemently. "I want that surprise in the morning. You know, Rod, I told you what we do every Christmas morning."

"Sure," said Roderick, and added decidedly, "No, we don't want to spoil the surprise."

"And you can't get any toys out down here, you know. Everything's ready for Christmas. Do you want to play upstairs awhile?"

"No, we don't want to play at all," Junior said. "We just want to stick around down here and feel Christmassy for a while."

"Then I know the most Christmassy thing in the world," I told them, "and you can do it while you are waiting for the carols. We won't have them quite so early, I'll promise you that. But if I let you stay up say an hour now, before we've sung the carols, will you promise to go cheerfully then. And will you mind if Hank and Bill and Mary and Noel draw the curtains while they trim the Christmas tree, so you won't see it until morning?"

When Junior Grows Up.

"Aren't you going to trim it?" Junior demanded with disappointment in his voice. "It won't be nice if you don't trim it."

I knew better than to show mock majesty for my loyal, loving little son was expressing a heartfelt conviction.

"I'm going to tell them where to put the things," I told him, "but I'll have to have help putting them on. I never could get them on all by myself."

"That'll be all right," Junior conceded largely. "And when I'm big I'll help you trim the tree. But there won't be anybody to surprise with it." (Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

FRESHEST GROCERIES

Not to be found in old packages

FOOD and other groceries in A&P stores are always fresh because they are sold quickly. New supplies, therefore, are constantly coming into these stores. Nothing stays on A&P shelves long enough to become stale.

For this reason you find in A&P stores only the latest packages put out by the manufacturers. Sometimes these packages are smaller than the old ones. Sometimes they are larger. But the manufacturers often leave the prices of their packages unchanged on account of varying costs.

This is why sometimes you get a smaller or a larger package in A&P stores than you get in other stores which sell the same goods. Old packages are never to be found where sales are rapid.
